5. Write a brief summary of the following passage:
- Man has an inborn curiosity to see the unseen and know the unknown. One can do many things to fulfill one's indomitable desire. A person usually tries to find out about the things and people surrounding him. As a result, he spends his life gathering experience but he leaves himself unknown. But, it is essential to know one's self. There are many ways and means to know others but the best way to measure one's self is self-criticism. It is undoubtedly important for a person to identify his or her personality. Thousands of years ago, philosophers speculated about that fact and advised people to know themselves first. Though it may be difficult to find out about our limitations, it is instructive and constructive for developing a better personality. Yet people spend most of their lives criticizing others. They find pleasure in analyzing the faults of others. It is high time that people learnt to analyze their shortcomings and tried to -rectify themselves.
