5. Write a brief summary of the following passage: 10
- Life is action and not contemplation, for man's worth is determined by his actions. It is this, which differentiates him from other creatures of the planet. It enables him to better his own quality of life, by engaging in some profession, so that the society as a whole shapes the fruit of his labour. All work is dignified, for it is better than being on dates, or at somebody else's mercy. Not only does it help us in living a life of dignity and esteem, we also observe in practical life that does not break down from overwork, but from worry or dissipation. This is so because work generates optimism that makes life pleasant. Ordinary people have risen to great heights by excelling in their work. We have such illustrious examples of Florence Nightingale, Albert Einstein and thousands of others. They have, by their sheer dint of hard work and devotion, become immortal.
